

CONTENTS

Preface to the second edition	v
Preface to the first edition	vii
Introduction	1

PART I FROM THE ORIGINS TO KEYNES

1. The Birth of Political Economy	19
1.1. Opening of the Modern World	19
1.1.1. The end of the Middle Ages and scholasticism	19
1.1.2. Communes, humanism and the Renaissance	22
1.1.3. The expansion of 'Mercantile' capitalism	27
1.1.4. The Scientific Revolution and the birth of political economy	29
1.2. Mercantilism	32
1.2.1. Bullionism	32
1.2.2. Mercantilist commercial theories and policies	34
1.2.3. Demographic theories and policies	36
1.2.4. Monetary theories and policies	38
1.2.5. Hume's criticism	40
1.2.6. Theories of value	41
1.3. Some Forerunners of Classical Political Economy	43
1.3.1. The premisses of a theoretical revolution	43
1.3.2. William Petty and 'political arithmetick'	45
1.3.3. Locke, North, and Mandeville	47
1.3.4. Boisguillebert and Cantillon	49
Relevant Works	51
Bibliography	52
2. The Laissez-Faire Revolution and Smithian Economics	54
2.1. The Laissez-Faire Revolution	54
2.1.1. The preconditions of the Industrial Revolution	54
2.1.2. Quesnay and the physiocrats	55
2.1.3. Galiani and the Italians	58
2.1.4. Hume and Steuart	63

2.2. Adam Smith	65
2.2.1. The ‘mechanical clock’ and the ‘invisible hand’	65
2.2.2. Accumulation and the distribution of income	68
2.2.3. Value	69
2.2.4. Market and competition	72
2.2.5. Smith’s three souls	73
2.2.6. Smith as an institutionalist	77
2.3. The Smithian Orthodoxy	82
2.3.1. An era of optimism	82
2.3.2. Bentham and utilitarianism	83
2.3.3. The Smithian economists and Say	85
Relevant Works	87
Bibliography	88
3. From Ricardo to Mill	90
3.1. Ricardo and Malthus	90
3.1.1. Thirty years of crisis	90
3.1.2. The Corn Laws	91
3.1.3. The theory of rent	92
3.1.4. Profits and wages	95
3.1.5. Profits and over-production	96
3.1.6. Discussions on value	97
3.2. The Disintegration of Classical Political Economy in the Age of Ricardo	100
3.2.1. The Ricardians, Ricardianism, and the classical tradition	100
3.2.2. The anti-Ricardian reaction	102
3.2.3. Cournot and Dupuit	104
3.2.4. Gossen and von Thünen	107
3.2.5. The Romantics and the German Historical School	109
3.3. The Theories of Economic Harmony and Mill’s Synthesis	111
3.3.1. The ‘Age of Capital’ and the theories of economic harmony	111
3.3.2. John Stuart Mill	113
3.3.3. Wages and the wages fund	115
3.3.4. Capital and the wages fund	118
3.4. English Monetary Theories and Debates in the Age of Classical Economics	121
3.4.1. The Restriction Act	121
3.4.2. The Bank Charter Act	124

	CONTENTS	xiii
3.4.3. Henry Thornton		127
Relevant Works		130
Bibliography		131
4. Socialist Economic Thought and Marx		133
4.1. From Utopia to Socialism		133
4.1.1. The birth of the workers' movement		133
4.1.2. The two faces of Utopia		134
4.1.3. Saint-Simon and Fourier		135
4.2. Socialist Economic Theories		138
4.2.1. Sismondi, Proudhon, Rodbertus		138
4.2.2. Godwin and Owen		139
4.2.3. The Ricardian socialists and related theorists		140
4.3. Marx's Economic Theory		142
4.3.1. Marx and the classical economists		142
4.3.2. Exploitation in the production process		146
4.3.3. Exploitation and value		148
4.3.4. The transformation of values into prices		151
4.3.5. Equilibrium, Say's Law, and crises		154
4.3.6. Wages, the trade cycle, and the 'laws of movement' of the capitalist economy		155
4.3.7. Monetary aspects of the cycle and the crisis		159
Relevant Works		161
Bibliography		162
5. The Triumph of Utilitarianism and the Marginalist Revolution		163
5.1. The Marginalist Revolution		163
5.1.1. The 'climax' of the 1870s and 1880s		163
5.1.2. The neoclassical theoretical system		165
5.1.3. Was it a real revolution?		167
5.1.4. The reasons for success		170
5.2. William Stanley Jevons		173
5.2.1. Logical calculus in economics		173
5.2.2. Wages and labour, interest and capital		176
5.2.3. English historical economics		179
5.3. Léon Walras		180
5.3.1. Walras's vision of the working of the economic system		180
5.3.2. General economic equilibrium		183
5.3.3. Walras and the articulation of economic science		187

5.4. Carl Menger	189
5.4.1. The birth of the Austrian School and the Methodenstreit	189
5.4.2. The centrality of the theory of marginal utility in Menger	192
Relevant Works	193
Bibliography	194
6. The Construction of Neoclassical Orthodoxy	196
6.1. The Belle Époque	196
6.2. Marshall and the English Neoclassical Economists	198
6.2.1. Alfred Marshall	198
6.2.2. Competition and equilibrium in Marshall	200
6.2.3. Marshall's social philosophy	202
6.2.4. Pigou and welfare economics	203
6.2.5. Wicksteed and 'the exhaustion of the product'	205
6.2.6. Edgeworth and bargaining negotiation	207
6.3. Neoclassical Theory in America	209
6.3.1. Clark and the marginal-productivity theory	209
6.3.2. Fisher: inter-temporal choice and the quantity theory of money	212
6.4. Neoclassical Theory in Austria and Sweden	215
6.4.1. The Austrian School and subjectivism	215
6.4.2. The Austrian School joins the mainstream	217
6.4.3. Wicksell and the origins of the Swedish School	218
6.5. Pareto and the Italian Neoclassical Economists	223
6.5.1. From cardinal utility to ordinalism	223
6.5.2. Pareto's criterion and the new welfare economics	226
6.5.3. Barone, Pantaleoni, and the 'Paretaio'	227
Relevant Works	229
Bibliography	230
7. The Years of High Theory: I	232
7.1. Problems of Economic Dynamics	232
7.1.1. Economic hard times . . .	232
7.1.2. Money in disequilibrium	234
7.1.3. The Stockholm School	236
7.1.4. Production and expenditure	238

CONTENTS	xv
7.1.5. The multiplier and the accelerator	241
7.1.6. The Harrod–Domar model	243
7.2. John Maynard Keynes	245
7.2.1. English debates on economic policy	245
7.2.2. How Keynes became Keynesian	249
7.2.3. The General Theory : effective demand and employment	251
7.2.4. The General Theory : liquidity preference	254
7.3. Michał Kalecki	258
7.3.1. The level of income and its distribution	258
7.3.2. The trade cycle	260
7.4. Joseph Alois Schumpeter	262
7.4.1. Equilibrium and development	262
7.4.2. The trade cycle and money	265
Relevant Works	266
Bibliography	268
8. The Years of High Theory: II	270
8.1. The Theory of Market Forms	270
8.1.1. The first signs of dissent	270
8.1.2. Sraffa’s criticism of the Marshallian theoretical system	271
8.1.3. Chamberlin’s theory of monopolistic competition	273
8.1.4. Joan Robinson’s theory of imperfect competition	275
8.1.5. The decline of the theory of market forms	278
8.2. The Theory of General Economic Equilibrium	280
8.2.1. The first existence theorems and von Neumann’s model	280
8.2.2. The English reception of the Walrasian approach	284
8.2.3. Value and demand in Hicks	286
8.2.4. General economic equilibrium in Hicks	287
8.2.5. The IS-LM model	289
8.3. The New Welfare Economics	291
8.3.1. Robbins’s epistemological setting	291
8.3.2. The Pareto criterion and compensation tests	292
8.4. The Debate on Economic Calculation under Socialism	295
8.4.1. The dance begins	295
8.4.2. The neoclassical socialism of Lange and Lerner	296
8.4.3. Von Hayek’s criticism	298

8.5. Alternative Approaches	299
8.5.1. Allyn Young and increasing returns	299
8.5.2. Thorstein Veblen	301
8.5.3. Institutional thought in the inter-war years	304
8.5.4. From Dmitriev to Leontief	308
8.5.5. The reawakening of Marxist economic theory	313
Relevant Works	316
Bibliography	318

PART II CONTEMPORARY DEVELOPMENTS OF ECONOMIC THEORY

9. Contemporary Macroeconomic Theories	323
9.1. From the Golden Age to Stagflation	323
9.2. The Neoclassical Synthesis	325
9.2.1. Generalizations: the IS-LM model again	325
9.2.2. Refinements: the consumption function	328
9.2.3. Corrections: money and inflation	330
9.2.4. Simplifications: growth and distribution	333
9.3. The Monetarist Counter-Revolution	335
9.3.1. Act I: money matters	335
9.3.2. Act II: ‘you can’t fool all the people all the time’	337
9.3.3. Act III: the students go beyond the master	340
9.3.4. Was it real glory?	343
9.4. From Disequilibrium to Non-Walrasian Equilibrium	346
9.4.1. Disequilibrium and the microfoundations of macroeconomics	346
9.4.2. The non-Walrasian equilibrium models	347
9.5. The Post-Keynesian Approach	351
9.5.1. Anti-neoclassical reinterpretations of Keynes	351
9.5.2. Distribution and growth	353
9.5.3. Money and the instability of the capitalist economy	358
9.5.4. Heterodox microfoundations of macroeconomics	360
9.6. The New Keynesian Macroeconomics	363
9.6.1. A distant Hicksian background	363
9.6.2. Nominal rigidities	365
9.6.3. Real rigidities	368

9.6.4. A comparison between some contemporary schools of macroeconomics	371
Relevant Works	374
Bibliography	377
10. Neoclassical Economics from Triumph to Crisis	380
10.1. The Neo-Walrasian Approach to General Economic Equilibrium	380
10.1.1. The conquest of the existence theorem	380
10.1.2. Defeat on the grounds of uniqueness and stability	384
10.1.3. The end of a world?	388
10.1.4. Temporary equilibrium and money in general-equilibrium theory	394
10.2. Developments in the New Welfare Economics and the Economic Theories of Justice	396
10.2.1. The two fundamental theorems of welfare economics	396
10.2.2. The debate about market failures and Coase's theorem	400
10.2.3. The theory of social choice: Arrow's impossibility theorem	404
10.2.4. Sen and the critique of utilitarianism	406
10.2.5. Economic theories of justice	409
10.3. The Controversy on Marginalism in the Theory of the Firm and Markets	413
10.3.1. Critiques of the neoclassical theory of the firm	413
10.3.2. Post-Keynesian theories of the firm	415
10.3.3. Managerial and behavioural theories	418
10.3.4. The neoclassical reaction and the new theories of the firm	420
Relevant Works	423
Bibliography	426
11. At the Margins of Orthodoxy	428
11.1. Games, Evolution and Growth	428
11.1.1. Game theory	428
11.1.2. Evolutionary games and institutions	432
11.1.3. The theory of endogenous growth	435
11.2. The Theory of Production as a Circular Process	437
11.2.1. Activity analysis and the non-substitution theorem	437
11.2.2. The debate on the theory of capital	440
11.2.3. Production of commodities by means of commodities	444

11.3. Marxist Economic Thought between Orthodoxy and Revision	446
11.3.1. Marxist thought before 1968	446
11.3.2. Marxist heresies	449
11.3.3. Toward a theory of value with the feet on the ground	451
Relevant Works	453
Bibliography	455
12. A Post-Smithian Revolution?	456
12.1. At the Threshold of the Millennium	456
12.1.1. Globalization	456
12.1.2. Modern and post-modern	461
12.2. Sources of Contemporary Institutional and Evolutionary Theory: Four Unconventional Economists	466
12.2.1. Karl Polanyi	466
12.2.2. Nicholas Georgescu-Roegen	469
12.2.3. Albert O. Hirschman	472
12.2.4. Richard M. Goodwin	473
12.3. Approaches to Institutional Analysis	475
12.3.1. The ‘new political economy’ and surroundings	475
12.3.2. Contractarian neo-institutionalism	476
12.3.3. Utilitarian neo-institutionalism	479
12.3.4. The new ‘old’ institutionalism	484
12.3.5. Evolutionary neo-institutionalism	489
12.3.6. Irreversibilities, increasing returns, and complexity	491
12.3.7. Von Hayek and the neo-Austrian school	495
12.4. Radical Political Economy	500
12.4.1. The monetary circuit and structural change theories	500
12.4.2. Analytical Marxism	503
12.4.3. Post-Marxism	508
12.4.4. The feminist challenge	510
12.5. Beyond Homo oeconomicus	512
Relevant Works	515
Bibliography	519
Index of Subjects	523
Index of Names	543